

About The Island

The island of Koh Lipe is located 70km off the Andaman (west) coast of Thailand's most southwestern province, Satun Province and shines out among some of Thailand's most beautiful, and unforgettable environments.

Koh Lipe is part of the important Adang-RAWI Archipelago, and an important gateway to the Tarutao National Marine Park. A group of local chao ley (sea gypsies), Urak Lawoi first settled on the island over one hundred years ago, and quickly established themselves as a resourceful community. The Urak Lawoi still reside on the island, with a healthy population of almost 800 chao ley, they now make up a large percentage of Koh Lipe's workforce and run several small business, which we encourage you to support.

Today, Koh Lipe attracts travellers from across the globe to enjoy some of the world's best beaches, and excellent snorkelling and diving. The island is easily circumnavigated by foot in less than an hour, so if you fancy a change of scene, you can hotfoot it between Koh Lipe's favourite beaches, and fuel your stay in any of the island's great bars and restaurants. Visitors are spoiled for choice for accommodation on Koh Lipe, with a great collection of upmarket and budget hotels and bungalows. It's an island rich in culture, and ripe with beauty.
